Frenchmen Give Hearty Praise to Duke for Plea in Broadcast

(By The Associated Press)

Pope Pius was disclosed today to be conveying to heads of governments through diplomatic channels his "ardent desire for peace" and a prayer that Europe's problems be solved "by the peaceful means to which all say after all they are disposed."

A Vatican news service said papal nuncios in various capitals were conveying the message. Nuncios in Germany, France and Poland were known to have conferred with government heads or foreign ministers. The apostolic delegate to London talked with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

The peace moves struck a more responsive chord in Germany than any other such efforts made thus far. A foreign office spokesman said such advances would be regarded as a "much more honest effort of mediation" than, for example, a British offer yesterday.

Soviet Backing Sought

Soviet Russia's support was the objective today of both groups of great European powers trying to line up the nations in their respective blocs, Britain-France and Germany-Italy.

The Soviet government studied the newest British proposals for participation in a British-French engineered alliance but gave no hint of its attitude toward the note presented yesterday to Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

It was understood Britain favored Russian assistance to all states bordering the Soviet Union with promises of British-French aid if such assistance involved Russia in war.

Increasing friendliness between Russia and Poland gave Britain hope, however, that her negotiations to bring Russia into a security pact were gaining ground.

Negotiations in Progress

But in Berlin German officials admitted that friendship negotiations to bring Russia into a security pact were gaining ground.

London diplomatic observers believed Russia's decision to send an ambassador to the vacant Warsaw post would clear the way for closer "Moscow-Warsaw" cooperation. Poland's suspicion of her big eastern neighbor has hampered negotiations thus far.

In Rome, Premier Mussolini paraded a sample of Italy's military might before visiting Germans who found a further opportunity to appraise the Fascist war machine which Il Duce has agreed to link with Germany's in a military alliance.

Mussolini spoke briefly in connection with the parade, part of an army day celebration, saying that "when the time comes" Italy would prove the strength of her arms and decisions.

The Berlin Morgenpost said the German-Italian military alliance, agreed upon two days ago by Foreign Ministers Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, would be signed in Rome early in June.

Reaction to Speech

The Duke of Windsor received hearty congratulations from French officials today for his plea—broadcast "simply as a soldier of the last war"—to "save human-

King Carol of Rumania Says Rumania's Army Needs Strengthening

Bucharest, Rumania, May 9 (AP)—King Carol declared today Rumania's army needed to be strengthened for defense both of her borders and her independence "in the present troubled times."

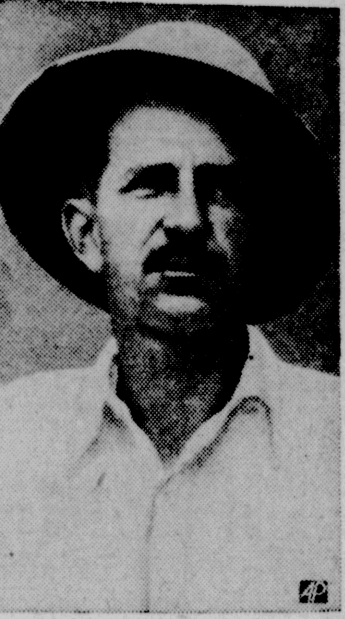

Seventy German engineers, here on an economic mission, were among the throng, including government leaders and foreign diplomats, present as the King unveiled a statue of his grandfather, Carol I, in front of the royal palace.

The monarch pointed out in his address that his grandfather, born a German Hohenzollern prince, had won independence for Rumania by building up her armed forces.

"Our country will fight desperately to maintain our territorial integrity and our independence," King Carol said.

Observers attached special significance to the King's address, since he talked only yesterday with Vladimir Potemkin, assistant commissar of foreign affairs of Soviet Russia, reportedly on the possibility of settling Bulgaria's demands for return of war-torn lands with economic help but no territorial concessions.

The U. S. consul in Berlin asked the Gestapo (secret police) to release Richard Rosson (above) and his wife, American citizens held at Graz, German Austria, on charges of making unauthorized pictures of military objects. Rosson was described as a photographer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Arizona Carpenter Is Charley Ross, Phoenix Jury Says

Horny-Handed Man, 69, Gets Legal Identification When Family of Kidnap Victim Defaults

Phoenix, Ariz., May 9 (AP)—Gustave Blair, 69, horny-handed carpenter, was legally identified today by the Maricopa County Superior Court as Charles Brewster Ross, principal in the sensational unsolved Germantown, Pa., abduction of 65 years ago.

On the basis of yesterday's court judgment, he envisioned the possibility of lucrative radio and film contracts.

The fact that Walter L. Ross, in Germantown, who usually speaks for the family in matters pertaining to the kidnapping mystery, would make no comment, did not phase Blair. Hundreds of persons have claimed they were the abduction victim.

"If my older brother (Walter) lives for five years, he'll seek me out and admit our kinship," he declared.

Blair filed the civil action to establish his identity. He named as defendants Walter, Sophia, Marian and Anne, other children of Christian and Sarah Ann Ross. They did not answer the complaint and Superior Judge G. A. Rodgers entered a default judgment.

"I have been ignored by Walter and other members of my family despite the fact that they knew my claims were justified," he said bitterly. "My wife and I sacrificed our home and in some instances have gone hungry to prove my birth right."

Won't Seek Money

Asked if he intended legal action to restore a portion of the family fortune which he as "Charley Ross" would be entitled, he said:

"There won't be any need for that."

Then he spoke in glowing terms of radio and film contracts which, he claimed, were to be given him, when and if, he ever secured recognition of a court that he was the kidnapped "Charley Ross."

He plans to use the name Charles Brewster Ross. Blair, on the witness stand yesterday, thumbed the yellowed pages of "The Charley Ross Kidnaping," written by the Christian Ross, the man he said is his father and who spent years and a good portion of his fortune in seeking his son.

Blair had summoned Lincoln C. Miller of Los Angeles, a foster brother, so seriously ill that he had to be brought to testify in a wheelchair. The jury spent only eight minutes deliberating.

Blair Declared

Blair declared he had an unbroken chain of evidence from 1873.

Charley and Walter Ross were kidnapped July 1, 1874, by two men on the promise that they would be given fine crackers for Independence Day.

Brother Found

Walter, two years older, was found a short time later in the northeastern section of Philadelphia. Three days later the Ross family received the first of 23 ransom letters demanding $20,000. Negotiations were futile. Months later two burglars were shot in Bay Ridge, Long Island. William Mosher, the reputed brains of the kidnap gang, was killed instantly. His companion, Joseph Douglas, lived long enough to tell police "it's no use lying now. Mosher and I stole Charley Ross from Germantown."

A third man was captured and sentenced to seven years in prison.

It is from the fourth member of the gang, however, that Blair traces his identity. He was John Hawks, a Lee county, Ill., farm youth.

Hawks, Blair said, got mixed up with the Mosher gang and told Rinear Miller, a Compton, Ill., farmer, he would like to take

President Calls Coal Conference At White House

Two-Month-Old Fight Over Contract Shifts From New York; Lewis Blames Roosevelt

Cites Violation

Miss Perkins Says Operators Guilty of Violation of Ethics

Washington, May 9 (AP)—President Roosevelt undertook personally today to settle the labor deadlock in the soft coal industry by calling operators and CIO Union miners to a White House conference.

The scene of the two-month-old parley over a new union contract shifted to the capital from New York in a series of rapid developments.

John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers and the CIO, blamed the Roosevelt administration and the labor department specifically for the shutdown which has kept 460,000 men from coal mines in 26 states.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, announcing acceptance of the invitations to the White House meeting, said last night the operators had been guilty of a "violation of the principle, of the ethics, of collective bargaining."

Miss Perkins also said that the coal commission would announce a coal crisis in the near future and that "the coal need is so great that the government owes it to the citizens to get the coal moving."

In Role of Mediator

The labor secretary described the President's role as that of a mediator. The conference marked Mr. Roosevelt's first direct intervention in a labor problem since he called leaders of the AFL and the CIO together during the winter in an effort to make peace between the rival organizations.

Miss Perkins held a long conference in New York with the coal negotiators yesterday. In the midst of that session, Lewis made public a letter to Dr. John R. Steelman, federal conciliator, saying:

"Failure of the Roosevelt administration to approve or sustain the mine workers' offers to keep the industry in operation caused many coal operators to believe that they had carte blanche to dismember the Mine Workers' Union if they could."

Declaring that "the closed shop is not an issue here, nor has it been," Lewis said the union proposed a two-year extension of its old contract, with the addition of the following sentences:

Exclusive Agency

"It is agreed that the United Mine Workers of America is recognized herein as the exclusive bargaining agency."

"If it is agreed that as a condition of employment, all employees shall be members of the United Mine Workers of America, except in those exempted classifications of employment as provided in this contract."

Miss Perkins said the union had offered on four occasions to continue mine operations during the negotiations.

She termed the failure of the operators to continue production "a mistake" and said she wished it could be corrected now.

"If it had, there would be no shortage of coal," she said, "and no hunger in the mining towns."

Miss Perkins expressed disappointment that during the negotiations the operators had not continued work under the old contract, which expired March 31, and said that this procedure had violated "the ethics of collective bargaining."

Student Government Mayor Connelly

Is Inaugurated at City Hall Exercises

A drive for an increased population; an effort to cut down the number of traffic accidents, and a greater scope of activities in the city's park system, were some of the recommendations made by Student Government Mayor Mark Connelly of 41 Catskill avenue, in his annual message delivered at the inaugural exercises of the student government officials held Monday evening in the city hall.

The inaugural exercises last night preceded Student Government Day which was observed in Kingston today when students of the civics classes in the Kingston High School and the Myron J. Michael School, took charge of city government affairs for the day.

The exercises last evening were held in the Common Council chambers on the third floor of the city hall, and were attended by students and members of the families of those who will have charge of city affairs today.

Kingston Is Included Among Stricken Areas

Chichester Fails To Win U. S. Aid For Re-Settlement

Lack of Forest Acreage Given as Reason Federal Group Loses Interest; New Plan Studied

The proposition of government financing for the purchase of the William O. Schwarzwaelder Company wood-working plant at Chichester as a Federal Department of Agriculture re-settlement project has fallen through.

It is claimed that inability to sign up sufficient re-forestation acreage is the cause. Depending on the tying in of a sufficient number of acres of timber land as a re-forestation project, it was planned to make the project a Department of Agriculture proposition but it is said that the investigation of the plan disclosed that it could not be brought under the Federal Department of Agriculture and that plan had been abandoned.

Loans to Employes

The plan was to loan the employes funds to take over the plant and continue operations in the village of the plant which has been the livelihood of the villagers for many years. Over a period of 40 years annual payments would be made on the loan and at the termination of that period the employes would own the plant free and clear. The government would take the plant and equipment as security for the loan made to purchase stock.

In order to tie the plan in with the Federal Department of Agriculture it was being considered as a re-forestation project. Land owners would be required to plant trees, lumber their lands in a scientific manner and supply a certain amount of timber each year to the plant. In this way the farmers of the area would be benefitted by the continued operation of the plant and the employes at the works would be given continued employment.

It has been learned that the plan, although approved by Philip E. Henderson, regional supervisor of the Farm Security Administration, Region No. 1, who made a personal investigation, failed to meet with the Department of Agriculture approval and has been dropped.

Temporary Operations

Supervisor George C. Smith of Shandaken was interested in the plan to keep the plant running and took the matter up with Lewis K. Rockefeller in Washington in an effort to put the Schwarzwaelder plant permanently in business. At present it is being run temporarily filling orders on hand.

Once the only industry in Chichester the William O. Schwarzwaelder Company plant employes practically every male person in the village. In later years it has been employing fewer of the men and became involved in financial difficulties when the business recession made its appearance. After months of difficulty the plant was closed and the men were unemployed for months until the present temporary work was opened up. The entire village is a part of the mill, practically every home being company owned, and nearly 100 per cent of the residents had become dependent on the mills for a livelihood.

It is understood that another plan for continuing the operation of the plant is going on quietly among several persons interested in the welfare of Chichester and its inhabitants.

Dr. Ingraham and Nurses Are Busy Assisting Health Officers in Ulster and Greene Towns

Malden Dairy's Milk Now Being Pasteurized, Say Officials

With one death recorded and well over 500 cases of streptococcus sore throat reported in the Saugerties area, Dr. Hollis Ingraham, district health officer, in charge of the Kingston office of the state health department, and his staff of nurses, are still busy today assisting the health officials of the town of Saugerties and the Greene county health officials.

The afflicted area includes the villages of Saugerties, Malden, West Camp and Veteran in Ulster county, and Cementon and Alsen in Greene county, with scattered cases in other sections.

Kingston Affected

Scattered cases have been found among residents of Kingston, Port Ewen, Catskill and Albany. Those stricken are all employed in the Saugerties area said Dr. Ingraham.

The death attributed to the outbreak is that of a man who resided in West Camp. He had been in ill health when stricken with streptococcus sorethroat. Dr. Ingraham said that the man would undoubtedly have recovered from his illness if he had not been stricken with the disease.

This, said Dr. Ingraham, is the only death so far that is attributed to the outbreak.

Questioned as to the number of cases in the Saugerties area Dr. Ingraham said that today they numbered well over 500.

Dr. James Perkins, director of communicable diseases, and Dr. Frederick Graves, veterinary of the State Health Department in Albany, were in Saugerties earlier in the week conferring with the district and town officials in reference to the outbreak.

From Five Herds

The outbreak was attributed to raw milk supplied by a dealer in Malden, who obtained his supply from five different herds. These herds were inspected and suspicious appearing cattle removed and given tests to determine if the cows were infected.

Laboratory tests are being made in Albany and a report is expected later.

The outbreak in Ulster county was brought to the attention of the Saugerties health officials last Saturday when Dr. John C. Kamp, and the town and school nurses, Miss Estelle Modjeska and Miss Hilda Hart, and Dr. James Crandall, sanitary inspector, began an investigation and called in Dr. Hollis Ingraham of this city, district health officer, who responded with his corps of nurses from the local office of the state health department.

Raw Cotton Prices Forcing Mills to Curtail Operations

A practical illustration of just how some of the theories advanced and put into practice in recent years, with view to alleviating the ills of mankind through government intervention, work out in the long run is seen in the announcement that southern cotton mills are curtailing operations because they are unable to obtain raw cotton at prices which will permit them to operate and show a profit. The announcement came yesterday in an official report of the New York Cotton Exchange's trade service. Meanwhile the government has on hand 11 and a half million bales of cotton which is being withheld from normal trade circles and which came into its hands through the price pegging plan under which the government loaned cotton producers funds in excess of the market price. With one of the greatest surpluses in the history of the country there is even talk of importing cotton to supply the textile industry. Meanwhile spot cotton at 10 southern markets yesterday averaged nine cents a pound, highest since July 8, 1938.

The stock market, with volume of 350,000 shares maintaining the low level of the past few weeks, opened a shade up from Saturday's closing prices on the industrial, moved a bit downward and then improved a trifle toward the close, final prices showing negligible losses for the day. Industrial had a net loss of 0.07 point, to 131.67 in the Dow-Jones averages; rails were down 0.20 point, to 26.68 and utilities declined 0.12 point, to 22.98.

There was buoyancy in the London market, following greater optimism over the European situation and announcement that London underwriters were making sweeping reductions in war risk cargo insurance. Amsterdam Bourse was active and generally firm. Paris market closed better in inactive trading.

Steel output generally for the week is estimated by the Steel and Iron Institute at 47 per cent of capacity, which is better than had been expected in many quarters. It represents a drop of 0.8 point from a week ago, while a month ago the rate was 52.1 per cent of capacity.

Leading Chicago building material firms report April sales at an average of 20 per cent above those of April, 1938.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said yesterday that he was greatly disturbed by the increase in the federal deficit which would occur if the Senate agricultural appropriation bill becomes a law in its present form. The bill exceeds budget estimates by $372,000,000 and is $381,409,959 more than the House bill. Included in the bill is $225,000,000 for parity payments and $113,000,000 for disposal of surplus farm commodities.

State Superintendent of Insurance Pink has directed New York insurance companies to announce by September 1 a downward revision of insurance rates on private passenger cars. Rate revisions will be made retroactive as of July, 1939.

Two Police Cases

Two cases were brought to the attention of Judge Cahill in police court today. Joseph Rockwood Gay of Dodge, Mass., was sentenced to two days in jail. Gay, who is 17 years old, is being held to await the arrival of members of his family. Leo Smith of this city was fined $10 for public intoxication.

Motion is Defeated

Albany, N. Y., May 9 (AP)—New York's senate today defeated, 32 to 12, a motion by Phelps Phelps New York city Democrat, to force a committee to report for a vote his bill for a referendum on the constitutional prohibition against gambling.

New York, May 9 (AP)—The stock market rambled in rallying territory today with leading issues posting gains running to two or more points.

Activity broadened in the forenoon. There were occasional subsequent slow-downs and some shading of prices. Volume again picked up later and, near the final hour, quotations were around the top. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 700,000 shares.

Recovery stimulation apparently was derived partly from the effort of President Roosevelt to bring about a quick settlement of the nation's menacing soft coal tie-up.

In addition, lessening of war tension, following provided some speculative balm and markets in London, Paris and Amsterdam did better.

Cheerful domestic business and political news was scarce, but there were isolated bright spots to be seen.

President Sends His New Plan to Congress

Washington, May 9 (AP)—President Roosevelt proposed his second government reorganization plan to congress today involving inter-departmental bureau transfers and consolidations estimated to save $1,250,000 a year.

The President in a lengthy message declared this would be his final reorganization proposal to congress this session under the recently enacted reorganization law.

"In view of the fact that it is now May ninth," he said, "and that any reorganization plan must lie before the congress for 60 calendar days, and because the reorganization of an intra-departmental character require a great deal of research and careful painstaking detailed work, I do not propose to send any further general reorganization plans to the congress at this session."

The first plan, involving merger of a score of independent lending, welfare and public works agencies into three new federal agencies, becomes effective June 24 because the veto resolution failed of passage in the House last week.

Today's Proposals

His second plan today proposes to:

Abolition of the National Bituminous Coal Commission and transfer of its functions to the secretary of the interior.

"The congress," the President said, "placed this commission in the department of the interior, but experience has shown that direct administration will be cheaper, better, and more effective than through the cumbersome medium of an unnecessary commission."

Transfer of the foreign commerce service of the commerce department and the foreign agricultural service of the agriculture department to the department of state for consolidation with that department's foreign service.

Transfer of the foreign service buildings commission now independent, to the state department.

Transfer of the bureau of light-houses, commerce department, to the treasury department for merger with the coast guard.

Abolition of the office of director general of railroads and war finance corporation, World War-born agencies, and transfer of their functions to the treasury.

"To be wound up" as rapidly as possible; the latter corporation to be finally dissolved not later than December 31, 1939.

Prison Industries

Transfer to the department of justice of the Federal Prison Industries, Inc., and National Training School for Boys, now independent, and abolition of the board of trustees of the latter institution.

Abolition of the codification board established to codify existing administrative law and transfer of its functions to the division of the federal register in the national archives.

Transfer to the department of interior of the bureau of insular affairs, war department, and merge it with the division of territories and island possessions.

Transfer to the department of the interior of the bureau of fisheries, commerce department, and biological survey, agriculture department.

Transfer to the agriculture department of the rural electrification.

A native of Lithuania, he came to the United States in 1875 and worked in West Virginia coal mines until several years ago. Not until 1936 did Bellah apply for old age benefits. Raw Cotton Prices Forcing Mills to Curtail Operations

A practical illustration of just how some of the theories advanced and put into practice in recent years, with view to alleviating the ills of mankind through government intervention, work out in the long run is seen in the announcement that southern cotton mills are curtailing operations because they are unable to obtain raw cotton at prices which will permit them to operate and show a profit.

The announcement came yesterday in an official report of the New York Cotton Exchange's trade service. Meanwhile the government has on hand 11 and a half million bales of cotton which is being withheld from normal trade circles and which came into its hands through the price pegging plan under which the government loaned cotton producers funds in excess of the market price. With one of the greatest surpluses in the history of the country there is even talk of importing cotton to supply the textile industry. Meanwhile spot cotton in the southern markets yesterday averaged nine cents a pound, highest since July 8, 1938.

The stock market, with volume of 350,000 shares maintaining the low level of the past few weeks, opened a shade up from Saturday's closing prices on the industrial, moved a bit downward and then improved a trifle toward the close, final prices showing negligible losses for the day. Industrial had a net loss of 0.07 point, to 131.67 in the Dow-Jones averages; rails were down 0.20 point, to 26.68 and utilities declined 0.12 point, to 22.98.

There was buoyancy in the London market, following greater optimism over the European situation and announcement that London underwriters were making sweeping reductions in war risk cargo insurance. Amsterdam Bourse was active and generally firm. Paris market closed better in inactive trading.

Steel output generally for the week is estimated by the Steel & Iron Institute at 47 per cent of capacity, which is better than had been expected in many quarters. It represents a drop of 0.8 point from a week ago, while a month ago the rate was 52.1 per cent of capacity.

Leading Chicago building materials firms report April sales at an average of 20 per cent above those of April, 1938.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said yesterday that he was greatly disturbed by the increase in the federal deficit which would occur if the Senate agricultural appropriation bill becomes a law in its present form. The bill exceeds budget estimates by $372,000,000 and is $381,409,959 more than the House bill. Included in the bill is $225,000,000 for parity payments and $113,000,000 for disposal of surplus farm commodities.

Two Police Cases

Two cases were brought to the attention of Judge Cahill in police court today. Joseph Rockwood Gay of Dodge, Mass., was sentenced to two days in jail. Gay, who is 17 years old, is being held to await the arrival of members of his family. Leo Smith of this city was fined $10 for public intoxication.

Motion is Defeated

Albany, N. Y., May 9 (AP)—New York's senate today defeated, 32 to 12, a motion by Phelps Phelps, New York city Democrat, to force a committee to report for a vote his bill for a referendum on the constitutional prohibition against gambling.

New York, May 9 (AP)—The stock market rambled in rallying territory today with leading issues posting gains running to two or more points.

Activity broadened in the forenoon. There were occasional subsequent slow-downs and some shading of prices. Volume again picked up later, and near the final hour, quotations were around the top. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 700,000 shares.

Recovery stimulation apparently was derived partly from the effort of President Roosevelt to bring about a quick settlement of the nation's menacing soft coal strike.

In addition, lessening of war tension in Europe provided some speculative balm and markets in London, Paris and Amsterdam did better.

Cheerful domestic business and political news was scarce, but there were isolated bright spots to be seen.

Bonds and most commodities securities were strong.

Stocks favored the greater part of the day included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Loew's, Consolidated Edison, Westinghouse, Texas Corp. and Johns-Manville.

No Cause Verdict Returned by Jury

A verdict of no cause of action was returned in the two negligence actions brought by Elizabeth G. Powell and Gertrude Allen, nee Hoover, in supreme court. Miss Powell was the driver of a car and Mrs. Allen a passenger. A motion was made to set aside the verdict and Justice Foster reserved decision.

A jury was taken in No. 10, Anna C. Young, as administratrix, et al., of Milton S. Young, against William S. Bush. Plaintiff claims damages for death of her husband, alleging that after an operation Dr. Bush left for a trip without placing anyone in charge of the case.

President Sends His New Plan to Congress

Washington, May 9 (AP)—President Roosevelt proposed his second government reorganization plan to congress today involving inter-departmental bureau transfers and consolidations estimated to save $1,250,000 a year.

The President in a lengthy message declared this would be his final reorganization proposal to congress this session under the recently enacted reorganization law.

"In view of the fact that it is now May ninth," he said, "and that any reorganization plan must be before the congress for 60 calendar days, and because the reorganization character requires a great deal of research and careful painstaking detailed work, I do not propose to send any further general reorganization plans to the congress at this session."

The first plan, involving merger of a score of independent lending, welfare and public works agencies into three new federal agencies, becomes effective June 24 because the veto resolution failed of passage in the House last week.

Today's Proposals

His second plan today proposes to:

Abolition of the National Bituminous Coal Commission and transfer of its functions to the secretary of the interior.

"The congress," the President said, "placed this commission in the department of the interior, but experience has shown that direct administration will be cheaper, better, and more effective than through the cumbersome medium of an unnecessary commission."

Transfer the foreign commerce service of the commerce department and the foreign agricultural service of the agriculture department to the department of state for consolidation with that department's foreign service.

Transfer of the foreign service buildings commission, now independent, to the state department.

Transfer of the bureau of light-houses, commerce department, to the treasury department for merger with the coast guard.

Abolition of the office of director general of railroads and war finance corporation, World War bonds agencies, and transfer of their functions to the treasury.

As the war wound up, as rapidly as possible, the latter now on to be finally dissolved not later than December 31, 1939.

Prison Industries

Transfer to the department of justice of the Federal Prison Industries, Inc., and National Training School for Boys, now independent, and abolition of the board of trustees of the latter institution.

Abolition of the codification board established to codify existing administrative law and transfer of its functions to the division of the federal register in the national archives.

Transfer to the department of interior of the bureau of insular affairs, war department, and merge it with the division of territories and island possessions.

Transfer to the department of the interior of the bureau of fisheries, commerce department, and biological survey, agriculture department.

Transfer to the agriculture department of the rural electrification.

Wicks is Hopeful For Albany Probe

Albany, N. Y., May 9 (AP)—A proposal for a legislative investigation of alleged political corruption in Albany county, dormant in Senate and Assembly for two months, acquired new life today with the submission of a bill calling for a $250,000 appropriation to finance such an inquiry.

The proposed investigation, originally urged by Manhattan District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey in his near-successful campaign for New York's governorship, will be pushed to a vote in the legislature this week, its sponsors said.

Republican Senator Arthur Wicks, Kingston, asserted he is confident the resolution for the inquiry, resting in the Senate finance committee since its introduction March 6, will be reported for a vote "within the next few days."

The measure proposed investigation into alleged "corrupt partisan political influence upon local government officials."

Wilson, Alias Leach Taken to Massachusetts

William M. Wilson, alias Royal B. Leach, 64, who has been serving a 90 days' sentence in the Ulster county jail, was taken to Arlington, Middlesex county, Mass., today by Lieut. Hornham of the Arlington Police Department, to answer to a larceny charge. According to the officer the charge is based on an indictment which dates back to 1933 and in addition there is a long string of complaints against Leach for offenses of a "flim flam" nature.

Leach, or Wilson, was arrested at Oswego February 6 by Officer Soper of the Kingston Police Department. It was alleged at a hearing before City Judge Cahill that in April he had represented to Mrs. Harriet Palen of 96 St. James street that he represented a Chicago waxed paper house. He wanted her to take an agency and pay him $95 for two rolls of waxed paper, but finally accepted $18 which was offered and said that later a boy would call and pay $95 for the paper. It was understood that Mrs. Palen would deduct the $18 she had paid and

THE JOB PROBLEM

"We are living in a strange, new world, where old standards and old idealisms and old concepts of right and wrong have been swept away," says Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women.

"Today ten million men and women are without normal jobs. It is impossible to visualize the right kind of world and at the same time a world in which capable, needy men and women must take their livelihood from the dole, inconsequential made-work or public charity. I do not believe 127,000,000 people in the richest land in the world will continue passively under such conditions as exist here. We must blaze the trail to a civilization in which there are jobs for all."

It is a fair statement about the biggest problem in America. And it isn't only an American problem—it is a world problem, which seems to come from industrial progress and at the same time tends to stifle that progress. Nearly all countries have had to grapple with it. Those which have not eased unemployment by the dole, or have tired of that makeshift, have mostly gone totalitarian and put their idle workers into the army or military production, or some other form of socialization.

We Americans do not want such remedies. We want to preserve our private capitalism and individual initiative so far as remains possible in this changing world. And for this ideal, many Americans think our best models are the Scandinavian countries. They seem to have stabilized their economic systems and preserved a large measure of private capitalism along with their experiments in co-operatives and public ownership.

Many Americans, however, still believe we can return to the old laissez-faire system, and hold out against compromise with any socializing processes.

INSPIRED CLEANER-UPPER

Probably few cities, large or small, used more appealing advance publicity for Clean Up Week than Oxnard, Calif. Four days before the start of this national festival, the Oxnard Courier carried on its front page a proclamation calling citizens to "a modern crusade in the public service."

With all the proper flourishes such as "Know all men, women and children by these presents," and so on, the proclamation proceeded to list the advantages of such a campaign—

"In safeguarding Health and Safety;
"In promoting Employment and Thrift;
"In promoting Better Housing;
"In furthering Fire Prevention;
"In stimulating Civic Pride; and
"In making the Home and City Beautiful."

In its "now, therefore, be it known" section, the proclamation made an important point too often neglected. It called for a "real campaign of persistent and constructive effort in cleaning up, fixing up and keeping it up."

If the results that follow live up to the quality of the call to self-improvement, Oxnard may yet get itself known as "First City" in this field.

SEEING THROUGH PROPAGANDA

It is possible that we are making too much of a bogey of "propaganda." The word, as we use it today, covers a big field, since most people or organizations or nations are trying to persuade others to their way of thinking. Ordinary advertising is legitimate propaganda. The word might even be stretched to include Mr. Dale Carnegie's very popular book. What about all our education and religious teaching?

Timid people, made fearful of propaganda by one-sided use of the word, might have learned from the success of sound advertising that it is possible to develop resistance to the false variety and to make profitable use of the straightforward and honest kind. Good advertising tells readers about an available product and persuades them to buy it, and everybody's happy. So, too, with any other "good" propaganda.

In the international field, why is it wrong for a government to try to "win friends and influence people?" The best attitude for all propaganda is a healthy skepticism along with a willingness to be convinced. An analysis that goes into the truthfulness of all claims, the reasons for their being put forward, the people back of them, and the effect of accepting them, will be enough protection.

It isn't smart or intelligent to be afraid of propaganda. Some varieties cancel each other out. Others are subtle and misleading, but the danger is largely counteracted by exposing all kinds to critical examination.

PING-PONG WIDOW

We've heard of golf widows and many other varieties, but here is a new one. Mrs. Roselyn Graham of Cleveland, suing for divorce, complains that her husband is so addicted to ping-pong that he rushes straight from his job to the ping-pong tables instead of coming home to dinner, and spends most of his night on the game.

Most people wouldn't suppose the silly little celluloid balls could be so alluring. But there's never any telling when or where a human mania will break out, or how far it will go. And age doesn't seem to have anything to do with it. Young fellows with their baseball or tennis and old fellows with their bridge are just like the little girls with their jackstones or the boys with their marbles.

There's some consolation, though, in this evidence that the human race, with all its troubles, doesn't lose its play spirit.

LAYS FOR LAYMEN

National Poetry Week (May 20-27) is just around a calendar corner. Poets and poetry societies will make special celebration, holding dinners and teas at which poetry will be read and poets honored. In some communities there will be programs in the schools and poems will be broadcast on special radio programs.

It isn't necessary to have a national poetry week for true poets. They will write their verses and strive to perfect them without the aid of artificial stimulation. Poetical ignoramus who don't know what they're missing should be rounded up on these occasions and exposed to small doses of good poetry, properly read. If it should "take" with only a few of them, it would be well worth while.

VOMITING IN CHILDREN

I have spoken before of trying to act as judge at a baby show. Apparently most of the mothers believed that the plumper the baby, the better were the chances of obtaining one of the prizes. As judges, we tried to take weight into consideration, but could not see that extra pounds of soft fat made up for shape of head and chest and contour of body as a whole.

While weight is rightly considered a good index of health in infants and children, overweight may cause symptoms unsuspected of being due to this overabundance.

Dr. Temple Fay, Philadelphia, in the Pennsylvania Medical Journal, states that vomiting in a normal, healthy baby may be caused by too much fluid in its food.

"The worship of body weight has led to the sacrifice of many fine young brains. Until the amount of fluid is reduced, or the baby loses weight, the vomiting continues. What most of these fat, overweight, vomiting babies need is a little concentrated food, or a period of starvation until the high tide (too much fluid) in the brain cavity has been reduced."

"If the baby's fontanelle (space between bones of the skull) is tense and his double chin complete, reduction in the amount of fluid given may be all that is required. The child has not too much fluid in his tissues and brain cavity, and is not overweight, and the vomiting continues, then some other condition such as intestinal obstruction or irritating food may be causing the vomiting."

A guide to the amount of fluid that may be safely given is found in the facts that cutting down on the amount of fluid leads to increased mental activity, whereas too much fluid results in mental torpor and finally stupor.

"The thin underweight child frequently comes through an attack of pneumonia or an operation with flying colors, while the plump baby more frequently does not."

The thought then is that when a healthy but very plump child has vomiting spells, not due to any apparent cause, the fact that too much fluid may cause the vomiting should be remembered.

HUDSON RIVER STEAMBOATS

These articles are written from the collection of George W. Murdock, veteran marine engineer.

No. 91—Saratoga

Known by rivermen as a "hard luck steamboat," the "Saratoga" plied the waters of the Hudson river for 33 years, and during that time was responsible for some loss of life as well as doing a great deal of damage to the vessel itself. She played a foremost part in the coincidences which labeled steamboats whose names began with the letter "S" as "hard luck vessels."

John Englis and Son of Greenpoint, N. Y., built the wooden hull of the "Saratoga" in 1877. Her keel was 285 feet long with an overall measurement of 300 feet, the breadth of her hull was 56 feet over the guards she was 70 feet, and she was listed for 1,438 gross tons and 1,281 net tons. Her vertical beam engine came from the "Sunnyside" and was a product of the Scott Iron Works of New York city, built in 1886. The cylinder diameter measured 56 inches with a 12 foot stroke. She had two steel return tubular boilers, and her wheels were 32 feet in diameter with 26 buckets to each wheel with a dip of 30 inches.

The "Saratoga" and the City of Troy ran in line between New York and Troy, forming the Citizens' Line; the "Saratoga" having replaced the steamboat "Never-sink" which had seen service on this route for a year, having replaced the "Saratoga" in 1876, which was discarded in 1876. The month of June, 1877 marked the first trip of the "Saratoga" to Troy, sailing under the command of Captain Thomas Abrams, with Abram Parsell as chief engineer. She boasted sleeping accommodations for 350 people, a large freight carrying capacity, and a speed of 16 miles per hour. She was built at a cost of $175,000.

The first accident recorded in the history of the "Saratoga" occurred on September 29, 1886. She left Troy on Monday evening, bound for New York with 230 passengers and 80 tons of freight aboard. About 2 o'clock in the morning, when the "Saratoga" was a mile south of Tivoli, she suddenly came in contact with something with such force that her boiler was cracked and the vessel halted. It developed that her pilot had miscalculated his whereabouts and had run at full speed on the flats between Little Island and the tracks of the Hudson River railroad. Soundings showed that the steamboat was embedded in the mud in only five feet of water—and it was not until October 11, 1886 that she was floated again.

On March 26, 1897, the "Saratoga" left her wharf at Troy for New York at 7:30 o'clock. Upon turning around she refused to obey her rudder, with the result that she smashed into the Congress street bridge at Troy. The river was high and the current swift, and she was thrown against the pier on her starboard side, carrying away much of her upper wood-work. Distress signals were immediately displayed which brought the steamer "Belle Horton" and a tugboat to her aid, and she was towed to the dock where she was later repaired.

July 29, 1897, the "Saratoga" while steaming up the river bound for Troy, collided with a large steam yacht, the "Hermonie." She almost went to the bottom on this occasion—the accident occurring near Stony Point. The "Hermonie" struck the "Saratoga" on the starboard side, destroying her bar-room, injuring one passenger and tossing many of the sleeping passengers from their bunks.

Other accidents are recorded in which the "Saratoga" was a factor, but she continued on the New York-Troy line until sunk in a collision with the steamboat "Adirondack" on Friday, October 12, 1906, off Cruisers Island, 60 miles below Troy. She was carrying a large number of passengers when this accident occurred, and was running in a light fog. Two lives were lost and several were injured. Clarence Sherman, an officer on the "Saratoga," was crushed to death, and George E. Horton, a freight clerk on the "Adirondack," was knocked overboard and drowned. The "Saratoga" was struck on the port side, being torn up from a point just aft of the wheelhouse almost to the stern. The port boiler was torn from the guards and dropped overboard. The "City of Troy" came along at this time and took off the passengers before the "Saratoga" went to the bottom.

The "Saratoga" was raised, repaired, and sold, and was then taken to the Jamestown Exhibition (1907) where she was used as a hotel during the summer. The "City of Troy" burned in 1907 and her boilers were installed on the "Saratoga" which was then placed on the route between New York and Albany (the summer of 1908), as an opposition vessel in line with the steamboat "Frank Jones" and running under the banner of the Manhattan Navigation Company Line. The "Saratoga" plied the waters of the Hudson river until the fall of 1910 when she was deemed worn out and dismantled. Her hull was purchased by Charles Bishop of Rondout, in 1911, and taken to Port Ewen and broken up.

Move Seen to Legalize "Sit-Down" Strike in C.I.O. Drive to Amend Sherman Anti-Trust Law

By DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1939)

Washington, May 9.—Announcement by the C.I.O. of a campaign to amend the Sherman anti-trust law so as to exempt the operations of labor unions will be regarded by many as a move to legalize the "sit-down" strike in America.

The C.I.O. insists the "sit-down" is not the issue, but the official announcement of the plan to amend the Sherman law is coupled with the Apex hosiery workers' case, which the federal courts of the United States have said is the direct consequence of an attempt to paralyze interstate commerce.

The Hosiery Workers Union inflicted damages on the company in question, which have been ordered paid to the extent of $700,000. An appeal against the amount of damage is being taken, but the original verdict held that the union guilty of interfering with interstate commerce by means of a "sit-down" strike.

The C.I.O. statement says: "The issue involved is not the sit-down strike, nor the claimed damages to the company's plant, but whether unions can exercise their lawful rights in strikes free from possible prosecution under the Sherman Act, regardless of the effect on interstate commerce."

It is in that last phrase—"regardless of the effect on interstate commerce"—that the purpose of the amendment is disclosed. What is asked is that the right to strike hereafter shall be absolutely unlimited and that it shall be upheld regardless of the effect on interstate commerce. Such a change in the law is a natural one for labor unions to demand because it gives them unlimited power of physical and economic coercion, but it is doubtful whether the rest of the citizens will wish to hand over to any group a license to do as they please with business property as a means of extorting a favorable contract.

There is merit in having the issue defined, for heretofore it has been assumed by the C.I.O. that the "sit-down" strike was a legitimate weapon of industrial warfare. It is difficult to see, also, how the Apex hosiery case involves anything else but a question of the right to use weapons for strike purposes, irrespective of the effect on interstate commerce.

The courts have denied this right on the part of any group, but it is, of course, within the authority of congress to make an exception of any group of citizens.

This effort to get a special position upon the question under the anti-trust laws is not new. It used to come up with the appropriation bills for the Department of Justice and again and again was the subject of bitter controversy in congress. In the old days, however, the conflict was over the right of labor unions to act in concert without being accused of "restraint of trade" or monopoly. The weapons were not the same as those employed in the Apex Hosiery case. The A. F. of L. supported efforts in the past to keep the Sherman Anti-Trust law from preventing unionization as such, and Incidentally, the C. I. O. persuaded the Department of Justice to begin the most conspicuous case yet under the anti-racketeering statute—the one against the Progressive Miners of Illinois, which is now pending. And it's the Progressive Miners' organization which is now biting back at the C. I. O. in the current coal industry negotiations.

Know Your Law

By
Carroll E. Mealey
Commissioner of Motor Vehicles

Here are presented some questions and answers on the subject of the Vehicle and Traffic Law and rules of the road. Readers are invited to submit questions to Information Service, Bureau of Motor Vehicles, Albany, N. Y.

Q.—If a person has an accident resulting in property damage only, what is he required to do?

A.—The driver must stop, exhibit his license and give his name, residence (including street and number) and license number to the person sustaining the damage.

Q.—Supposing the owner is not present, then what does the driver do?

A.—In that case, he must report to a police officer, giving the same information mentioned above. In the event no police officer is nearby, then the report should be made to the nearest police station or judicial officer, as soon as the driver is physically able to make the report.

Q.—In the case of a personal injury accident, what is required of the driver?

A.—In addition to reporting to the injured party, as in property damage accidents, the driver must report the accident to a police officer and also required to file a written report of the accident with the commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

Q.—In the event an operator involved in a personal injury accident fails to comply with these requirements, does he lose his license?

A.—Two violations would be involved: Leaving the scene of an accident without reporting and failing to report an accident to the commissioner. For the former offense, if there is a conviction, the license must be revoked; for the latter, the license may be revoked at the discretion of the commissioner.

that he accepted the office. It was also his pleasure, he said, to thank Mayor Heiselman in behalf of the 200 odd civics students in both the Kingston High and the Myron J. Michael School of the opportunity offered the students to study the internal workings of the city government.

"We realize," he said, "that through your efforts and those of your subordinates, our growing citizens, the man and the woman of tomorrow are being prepared for the life that will follow in later years."

"When one stands beside a great machine and sees it work he or she gets the impression that something enters here and comes out over there as something different. Just so with our city government."

"In the class room students see only a great machine, some things go in, others come out, but to get the real significance, the genuine appreciation and understanding of that machine it must be explained and dissected by those who run it. It must be taken apart, piece by piece, then, and only then, can a reasonable understanding come about."

"Mr. Heiselman you have seen the danger and have prevented its occurrence. Great executives avoid the pitfalls of today, and prevent those of tomorrow as have. Our deepest thanks to you, Mayor Heiselman, for your wonderful work among the students of our city."

President Schwenk administered the oath of office to Donald Friedman, student government alderman-at-large, and City Marshall Melville administered the oath to Miss Janet Noble, student government city judge.

Council Convened

Following the installation ceremonies the student government common council met and organized. The thirteen members who serve are William Whitney, David Lane, Ruth Smith, Mary Simon, Robert Pemberton, George Fowler, Isabelle Wood, Clayton Stalter, Matilda Bowers, John Sanglyn, Florence Clark, Stanley London and Marilyn Beichert.

After organizing, Student Mayor Connolly was notified that the council was ready to receive any message he cared to transmit. The student mayor was escorted to the rostrum and greeted with hearty applause.

The Mayor's Message

Student Mayor Connolly in his annual message to the student Common Council said: "The year 1939 will undoubtedly be momentous in the history of Kingston's development."

We are now emerging on a period of growth that may well increase the status of our city from one of 30,000 to that of a mid-Hudson metropolis of nationwide importance.

To the south of us a great international fair is being held, and to this exposition there will pour millions of people from all parts of the world.

A great portion of this tremendous cavalcade will pass through the city of Kingston en route to New York.

It is my proposal to attract part of this cavalcade to settle in our city. The construction of large signs at both the north and south entrance would lure the attention of many to this district.

Posters, cards, advertisements would bring others to settle here. In fact, if an organized sales drive is made at this time, I am confident that the favorable results would far exceed the highest expectations.

This, ladies and gentlemen of the Common Council, may prove to be the greatest opportunity to increase our financial and physical resources ever presented to the people of our city.

And now a series of recent events makes it necessary for me to change my topic from one of expansion to that of prevention. During the past month a wave of pedestrian and automobile accidents have swept the city.

In spite of the recent accident prevention drive throughout Kingston these conditions still exist as a serious detriment to our progress. Now the time has come when we must stamp out such occurrences, no matter what the cost.

As far as the motorist and the pedestrians are concerned every street should be a zone district, every intersection should be considered as having a stop light, the public must be made accident conscious. They must be made to see the ghastly costs of their mistakes.

In other cities, signs of reminding character have been used with wonderful success. Commanding posters, strict enforcement, would all contribute to making our city one of the safest in New York state.

The advent of spring each year is a joyful occurrence to hundreds of children throughout the city proper. To them it means sunshine and fun that comes with farm weather. It means the opening of the city's parks and all the games and sports they could play on the park grounds.

These children have learned to practically depend on these havens for their very health and well-being. Complete as the system is today there is still room for more advancement.

The saving of one child from a criminal life is adequate repayment of the money spent in creating these parks. Therefore I suggest to this Common Council that our park system be reconditioned to cover a much greater scope of activity.

With these suggestions to you, the law making body, I hereby close my annual message with the hope that your session will be one of advancement and progress, and will be heralded as one of the most efficient in our city's history."

4-Cylinder Racers

The importance of the four-cylinder motor in the world of speed and endurance will attract attention again this year when the foremost racing drivers of the world assemble for the annual Memorial Day race at Indianapolis.

Impressed by the fact that the winning drivers in this annual classic have in each of the past five years driven four-cylinder cars, the racing world is turning to the four-cylinder motor with renewed interest in preparing for this year's race.

Local Townsend Club Will Meet

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Townsend Club will be held Wednesday evening this week at Mechanics Hall.

The club is entitled to five delegates to the national convention to be held in Indianapolis next month. These delegates will be elected at the meeting of the club Wednesday evening. In addition to other important business a questionnaire program will be presented.

Early in June the eastern district of New York state will hold its monthly rally and conference in Kingston. The club here is having difficulty in finding a hall ample for the accommodation of the large number of delegates expected.

Some notable speakers of the Townsend Movement will be present and address the two sessions of the conference. The public is invited to attend this rally. At all Townsend meetings here, the Townsend Glee Club and Harmonica Band give selections, and the Townsend Crusade songs are sung. The music is under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Niles.

Friday evening this week a delegation from Kingston will visit the newly organized clubs at Ellenville.

Sunday afternoon the monthly rally of Eastern New York will be held at Glens Falls. National Representatives Harry B. Elliott and Frederick G. Brooks will be present and address the conference. A number from Kingston and nearby clubs expect to attend.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters
 Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.
 Tally Mack, a young farmer who has inherited half the Russell estate, Seaciff.

Yesterday: Little Betsy trespasses on the Russell side. She says Uncle Tally is going to raise money.

Chapter Eight Truck Farm

I ATE in the afternoon the crowd insisted on feasting their conquering hero and arranged an impromptu dinner and dance at the club; inviting everyone to stay on in sport clothes and join in the private celebration. Jocelyn perceived that Bob longed to get away, and she reflected spitefully that he probably wished to see how his protégés were doing at Seaciff.

However, as he was guest of honor, he had no opportunity and so it was well past midnight when they got home.

An unfamiliar reiterated sound woke her at daybreak. Her mind, sleep-drunken, finally identified it as the crowing of a rooster. Pulling the covers over her ears she started drifting back to sleep when suddenly the realization smote her that there were no roosters at Seaciff. It took a few minutes for this thought to penetrate, but when it did she struggled upright and strained her ears. It was a rooster.

Curiosity overcame sleepiness. After taking a cold shower to wake up, she towed her flannel slacks and slipped a woolly blue sweater over her tousled curls.

Her stealthy creeping down the back stairs was halted by a new sound. A sort of low, rumbling animal sound. . . the lowing of a cow!

One minute later she stood on Mack territory surveying with astonishment what had yesterday morning been a double tennis court and was now a chicken pen. The tennis nets had been taken down and the entire space enclosed in close-mesh wire. Dozens of white chickens pecked at grain strewn plentifully over the hard-rolled turf.

Again she heard the cow. Two spots of angry color appeared in her cheeks. She marched to the stable and jerked open a door; peered into the comparative darkness on the left side beyond the two horses selected by the Macks, two black and white cows.

"Of all the nerve!" she exclaimed. "Oh, good morning, Miss Russell," called an amused voice. "Admiring my livestock?"

Jocelyn headed for the voice; found Tally calmly sitting on a box milking one of the animals. "How dare you put cows in here?" she whispered.

"They are fine representatives of the bovine genus," Tally rattled on imperturbably. "Guaranteed to give five gallons of milk a day. The chest of drawers in Gretchen's room bought these."

"And what bought the chickens?" she choked.

"Two tabbies and three chickens. And the low cost bed. Chicken feed and human feed cost two pictures and a tapestry."

"Plover—plover?" she stammered.

"Sure. For the garden. If I plow up all the ground for the tennis courts back to the stables—on my side, of course—I can raise enough potatoes, peas, beans, carrots and onions to feed my family and have some left to sell."

Jocelyn counted to ten and swallowed hard. "But you can't do this!" she declared. "You've just can't turn Seaciff into a-a truck farm! It's desecration. You just can't do it!"

'Peasant'
 "SORRY, I've already done it. Since circumstances forced us to live on this feudal estate of yours, that same circumstance forced me to find some way to eat and make a living. There's really nothing you can do about it, Miss Russell. Would you mind leaving? You seem to be making the cow nervous and if she gets nervous she won't give milk."

"Oh!" she choked, feeling as if her face were purple. "So I make your cow nervous, do I? I hate you—you—peasant!"

"Please, Miss Russell, if you don't stop upsetting my cow I shall have to put you out! Oh, by the way, are these horses broken to harness? I shall have to use two of them for plowing."

"Listen—listen to me," she implored wildly. "If you had to raise money why didn't you give me an opportunity to buy my own grandmother's possessions, instead of selling them to strangers? I would have paid you the same amount. Those things are heirlooms; they mean something to a Russell. It was a horrid thing to do—I'll never forgive you for it!"

"Sorry again," she apologized, yet he did not sound the least bit regretful. "It never occurred to me you'd want that creaky old stuff. Believe me, the next time I shall inform you."

"The next time!"
 "Certainly. It just happens I am more concerned with living right now on food instead of living in the past on memories."

"You've already sold everything of any value to a dealer," she complained bitterly.

"Not yet," he corrected. "There's a rosewood cabinet—"
 "Which came over from England in eighteen-twenty," Jocelyn pleaded. "Grandmother treasured it above everything else. Please let me buy it from you now?"
 "Oh, no," he refused. "I have plenty of money for the present. Besides, my grandfather has taken a fancy to it. He says your grandmother and he used to write each other notes and hide them in a secret drawer. I think it's only right he should have it. It couldn't mean as much to you as it does to him."
 "But I'll buy it!"
 "It isn't for sale. Now will you go?"

"Listen," she pleaded, a real note of desperation in her voice, "if you'll give up this idea of farming I'll see that Thorndyke settles part of our money on you."

"We don't want charity." His tone was curt; his eyes forbidding. "Anyhow, what is so terrible about chickens and cows and vegetables?"

"Nothing!" she snapped. "Nothing at all to a peasant who knows nothing better!"

His black eyes, disdainful and insolent, bored into her. "Perhaps I am a peasant," Miss Russell, but if you are an example of blue-blooded aristocracy, then I'm quite content to remain a peasant. Now get out or I'll throw you out!"

Thoroughly infuriated, Jocelyn gasped: "Don't worry. I'll go. I wish I never had to see that ugly face of yours again as long as I live!"

'Sentiment'
 AT THE end of the first week Jocelyn complained bitterly to Thorndyke of the ubiquitous Macks, for it seemed that every time one of her friends' cars stopped before the house it was a signal for old Talbot Mack, garrulous and chuckling, to appear. He was impervious both to Jocelyn's coldness and to her suggestions he might be needed elsewhere. Also, most of the time Betsy accompanied him and between the two of them they monopolized attention and conversation. As if this wasn't enough there was an added anathema in the background: Tally guiding a plow over the proud lawns; his black hair shining in the sun; his work shirt, its sleeves rolled high on brown muscular arms, open halfway down his chest.

Jocelyn could no longer relate to her crowd the doing of the day with any degree of amusement. Her sense of humor deserted her completely.

"It is not humorous to see Seaciff turned into a truck and dairy farm!" she told Thorndyke.

Thorn, plucking nervously at his neat mustache, said: "I'll speak to the boarder at once, Lyn! I shall insist he stop this nonsense. We must have some rights before the law, my dear. Whatever was Grandmother thinking of, anyhow?"

"I don't know," Lyn frowned, gazing absently out at the spilling spring sunshine. "I only wish we were here to enjoy her beloved legates! If she had hated every one of us she couldn't have conceived a more diabolical punishment—but she didn't hate us. She loved us. She sold the land, piece by piece over a period of years, so none of us should want for anything; so she could leave us enough money to last until we all married and could take care of the place if we wished. You know she never denied me anything."

He nodded. "She told me once she knew that she had spoiled you; that you would probably marry Geoffrey, not because you would be in love with him, but because your craving for luxury would make you believe you loved him. She said she felt sorry for the person who tried to cross you or balk your desires; yet if it was a man and he was hardy enough, you might find happiness with him."

"Thorn, am I selfish—spoiled?"
 "Don't be ridiculous, Lyn. Of course you aren't."

"Perhaps I am and don't realize it," she reflected. "Still, I don't quite see how to find out. Certainly I'm not going to worry about myself when—Thorn, what I can't understand is why, since Grandma knew long before she died of this will, she didn't prepare us. And why did she stipulate I had to marry young Talbot before the estate could be sold?"

Thorn cleared his throat; spoke with confident authority: "Sentiment. It must have been. Doesn't it occur to you that she wanted you to marry him? That she knew this house would not survive two families and sooner or later we would be driven to sell it?"

"But who would want to sell it? She loved this house!"

"I wonder if she did, really," he mused.

"You think she didn't?" Jocelyn gasped, astounded. "Oh, Thorn, that's silly. You don't mean—you don't believe she was unhappy?"

"That she regretted marrying Grandfather Russell and—leaving that impossible old man?"

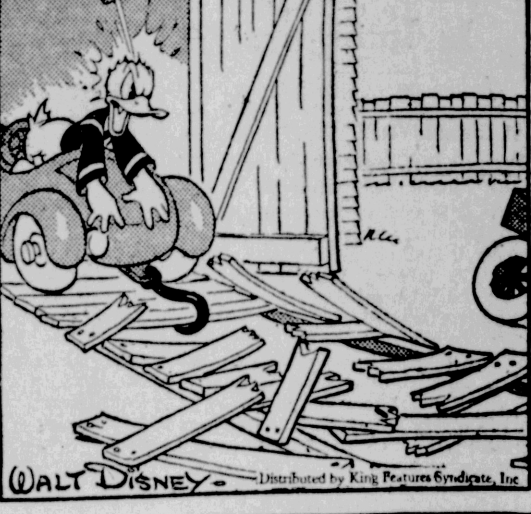

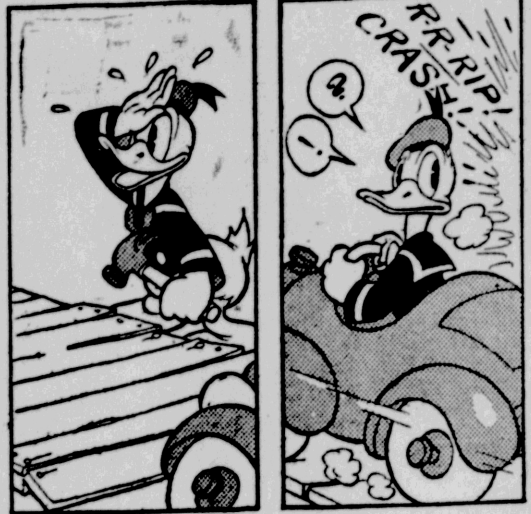

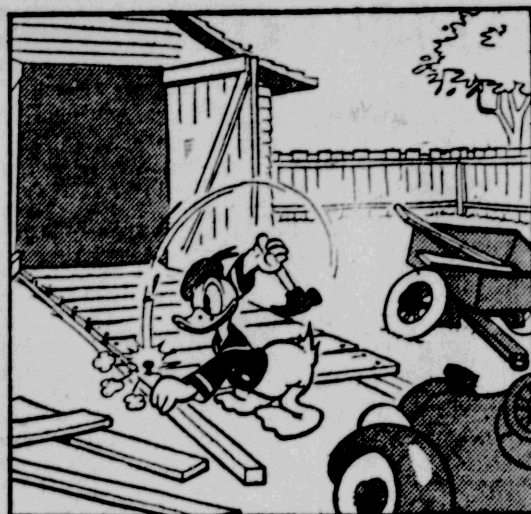

"Aren't you forgetting that old man was only twenty-two when this ancient love affair took place? He was a fiery young Scotch-Irishman. He must have looked a great deal as his grandson does now. I admit I haven't much imagination but I think I can understand a woman's fancy being caught by that type of man."

Continued tomorrow.

Forty-and-Eight To Stage 'Wreck'

At the last promenade of the Ulster County Voiture, No. 381, of the Societe des 40 Hommes et 8 Cheveaux, held in Ellenville, it was unanimously decided to hold the annual wreck (initiations) in Kingston on Saturday, June 3.

Chief de Gare R. Earl Haley has appointed the following committee to formulate the details and entertainment of the visitors for the various Voitures in the Hudson valley district: Lester C. Elmendorf, conductor of the Ulster County Voiture, chairman; and Voyagours Mike Bruno and Daniel W. Benton.

Owing to the fact that the American Legion Memorial Building has not enough floor space to stage the wreck properly, Conductor Elmendorf is searching for a hall suitable for the purpose.

The wreck of the Forty and Eight is most colorful and impressive.

The Voitures of Rensselaer, Orange, Greene, Dutchess, Albany and Westchester counties will be represented at the meeting here. Correspondent Gus S. Paulson of the Ulster County Voiture, assisted by Commissaire Intendant Andrew J. Murphy, Chief de Train Eugene MacConnell, and Voyagours Nelson W. Snyder, are working on the details for the entertainment of the state officials of La Societe who have accepted invitations to be present.

The affair will cover a two-day period, Saturday and Sunday, June 3 and 4.

Grand Chief de Gare Walter Peterson, Grand Correspondent Thomas F. Dugan, Grand Commissaire Intendant Lisle O. Wagner of the Grand Voiture of the Department of New York, will be the guests of the Ulster County Voiture.

Grand Cheminot Joseph E. Abbott of the third district will be in charge of the wrecking crew, assisted by Conductor Elmendorf. The 40 & 8 is the service organization of the American Legion. Its motto is "For Fun, Fellowship and the American Legion."

Arizona Carpenter Is Charley Ross

Miller's son, Lincoln, then aged 11, to Pennsylvania as a companion for his sister's child. The elder Miller acceded.

Later, he and Hawks were stationed in a Pennsylvania cave to which Blair was brought by three other men. While there, Lincoln Miller testified in court yesterday, the four-year-old child told him he was Charley Ross.

When the three confederates of Hawks disappeared, he became frightened, dressed Charley as a girl and with Lincoln fled to Illinois, Blair said he later learned.

Back at the Miller farm, Blair was adopted into the family and given the name of Nelson Miller, which he later changed to Gustave Blair. Several years later, Blair said, the elder Miller told him in 1908, Hawks returned to the Miller ranch and declared "we've got to get rid of that kid. As long as he's around he can get both of us into trouble."

The elder Miller's answer to this, Blair testified, was to kill Hawks.

Blair left the Miller ranch in 1908 and went to Chicago. He began fighting for legal recognition as "Charley Ross" in 1934. Several times, he said, Walter Ross had offered to hear his claims through an attorney, but never did.

Another Kidnapping
Philadelphia, May 9 (AP)—Mysteriously missing Gerald Brusco gave Philadelphia police another "Little Charley Ross" case as daily radio appeals for his return were ended today and some searchers expressed a belief he had been stolen by a childless woman.

Philadelphia home where his parents cling to the last shreds of hope that he may be safe.

Giving up a fruitless search of nearby swamplands and abandoning the dragging of water-filled sink holes, police have concentrated on a house-to-house search of Gerald's own neighborhood to test the childless woman theory.

"I feel sure the boy is alive," said Police Captain John Murphy. "Otherwise we would have found his body. It is my opinion that the boy has been taken by some woman crank who has never had a child of her own and that she is keeping him locked up in her home."

Like the parents of Charley Ross, kidnapped from his Germantown home 65 years ago, Gerald Brusco's parents have said they would spend the rest of their lives searching for him.

Negligence Case Testimony Ends

Two cases growing out of an automobile accident which took place on 9-W at Balmville, near Newburgh, on April 6, 1937, were on trial Monday in Supreme Court before Justice Sydney F. Foster and a jury and were concluded this morning when summations were made, charge delivered and the cases delivered to the jury.

Elizabeth G. Powell, formerly of New Jersey, now of Woodstock was driving her car along 9-W accompanied by Miss Gertrude Hoover, now Mrs. Allen, when it was in collision with a car operated by James C. Hungerford, formerly of Newburgh, now of Port Ewen. The two young women seek damages for injuries and Miss Powell for damage to the car.

Mrs. Allen testified to slight injuries and claims damages for loss of work. According to her testimony she was riding in the front seat with Miss Powell when the cars came together. The Powell car continued along the road turning over in its travel and when the car stopped Mrs. Allen said she found herself in the rear seat. Miss Powell suffered more severe injuries and was treated by physicians for some time after the accident.

Mr. Hungerford claimed that his car was proceeding slowly and that he was not to blame for the crash, claiming that the other car was proceeding at a fast clip and he testified his car had practically stopped when the crash took place.

Guido J. Napolitano and N. J. Fowler appear for the plaintiffs and David Copans with N. Levan Haver as trial counsel, appear for the defendant.

Club Will Hold Sale for Blind

Ada Howell, director of sales of the Albany Association of the Blind, was a guest Monday evening at the weekly meeting of Kingston Lion's Club. Also present as a guest of the club was Charles Brand of Schenectady, concert organist who is heard on the Union College program under direction of Elmer Tidmarsh. Mr. Brand, who is being given his musical education by the Schenectady Lions Club, has been blind since birth. He played a piano selection and also told of his own experiences.

The meeting Monday was in preparation of the opening of the local sale of articles made by the blind which will open Monday, May 15, on Main street adjoining the Sea Grill. Articles made by local blind will be on sale as well as articles made by the Albany Association. This sale is held under auspices of the Kingston Lions' Club and is sponsored by Mrs. Schuyler Schultz, ladies' chairman of the Lions' Club blind committee.

The Kingston Lions' Club voted to change its meeting hour and day for the summer beginning with the first meeting in June. In order to make it more convenient for members and also in order that traveling Lions en route to the World's Fair may attend the meetings will take place at the Governor Clinton Hotel at noon Tuesdays.

Bill Would Stop Optometry Tests In Retail Stores

Albany, May 9 (Special)—Approval of the Assembly has been given to the bill of Senator Arthur H. Wicks, Republican, of Kingston, amending the education law providing for licensing and regulating the practice of optical dispensing.

The bill, which was backed in the Assembly by Assemblyman J. Edward Conway, also of Kingston, passed Monday night in the lower House of the Legislature by a vote of 125 to 17, after considerable debate.

Senator Wicks' bill must first go to the Senate for concurrence in some amendments made to it in the Assembly, before proceeding to the Governor for final disposition.

As outlined in the measure, a board is created in the state education department for licensing and regulating the practice of optical dispensing, which is defined as the fitting or compounding of ocular prescriptions involving lenses, spectacles, eyeglasses or optical devices.

Principal opposition to the measure, which came from Assemblyman Meyer Goldberg, New York Democrat, centered about a provision prohibiting price advertising by persons licensed to sell eyeglasses.

It was charged by Assemblyman Goldberg that this provision would "stifle business" and "ruin business competition." In addition, he alleged, this crippling of business would result in loss of jobs held by persons now working in this field.

Assemblyman Conway, defending the prohibition against price advertising, asserted that the bill has been designed to eliminate the present fraudulent and misleading advertising of prices for eyeglasses engaged in by some dealers.

Quite often, Mr. Conway pointed out, eyeglasses are advertised at "cheap" prices, but when the customer tries to purchase his glasses at this price, he is informed that his eye condition is something "special", requiring a super-glass, which will cost considerably more.

In the Senate, Senator Wicks has introduced a tax law amendment, imposing a tax of $1 a gallon on brandies made from the juices of apples, in lieu of the standard alcoholic beverage tax. The bill went to taxation committee for further consideration.

Another Wicks bill amending the tax law, has passed in the Assembly and been forwarded to the Governor for signature. This bill provides that towns in which summer hotels have been licensed to sell beer, wine or liquors, shall be entitled to participate in the distribution of liquor taxes.

Vote on this bill was 138 to 5.

Secret Plea for Peace

London, May 9 (AP)—British civil servants have broadcast an "anti-war" message to German civil servants over a secret station, it was disclosed today. W. J. Brown, secretary of the civil service clerical association, told the annual association conference at Clacton-on-Sea that he had made an appeal recently over the "German Secret Freedom Station" whose location he declined to disclose. "I told them we neither desired to kill them nor be killed by them," Brown said, "but that we only wanted to live in peace."

Three Cars in Accident On Plank Road Monday

The car of Thomas J. Murphy of 87 Pine Grove avenue was badly damaged in the back and that of Joseph Thornton of Glenford was damaged about the front in an accident near the Avalon on Route 28 about 3:45 Monday afternoon. A truck driven by Clayton Hawley of Hamden, N. Y., was also involved in the accident.

Deputy Sheriff Vredenburg and Winne, who investigated the accident, found that the collision occurred when Thornton started to pass the truck just as the latter turned to enter the Avalon parking space on the west side of the highway. Thornton struck the left rear end of the truck and then ran into the rear of the Murphy car, which stood in the parking space several feet from the road. Neither driver was injured.

Troop Invested At Saugerties

Dr. H. W. Keator, president of the Ulster-Greene Council, and Scout Executive Burns invested Troop 38 of Saugerties, at the weekly meeting of the Saugerties Lions Club, which is sponsoring the troop. This makes the second new troop to be organized in Saugerties within a few months.

William Woestendiek, chairman of the Saugerties District, presented the charter to the president of the Lions Club. Troop committee commissions were presented by Grant Morser, court of honor chairman. Lawrence Cahill, district commissioner, had charge of the candlelight ceremony for new scouts and their officers.

Since the first of January, six new troops have been organized in the council area, and with several more in process of organization it is hoped to have 13 new ones before the end of the year. A special meeting of the Scouters of the Kingston District was held at the Governor Clinton Hotel Monday night. There was a discussion of plans for the coming Camp-o-ree to be held on the Army grounds, at which time the Kingston District will act as host, also plans for recruiting scouts to attend Camp Half Moon, which opens July 2.

Dr. H. W. Keator, president of the council, also presented a financial statement of the standing of the council and plans for reducing indebtedness during the next two years.

ity from the terrible fate which threatens it." He was greeted by a group of Meuse department officials shortly before he and his American-born duchess began an automobile trip back to Paris after a tour of World War battle sectors.

The French press, like British newspapers, gave prominent display to the duke's brief address of last night, but refrained from comment. Semi-official and diplomatic sources in France said that the speech was "welcome" in its appeal for the maintenance of peace.

"I speak simply as a soldier of the last war whose most earnest prayer it is that such cruel and destructive madness shall never again overtake mankind," the former British monarch said.

"The grave anxieties of the time in which we live compels me to raise my voice in expression of the universal longing to be delivered from the fears that beset us, and to return to normal conditions."

"The problems that concern us at the moment are only the reproductions on a larger scale of the jealousies and suspicions of everyday life. In our personal contacts we strive to live in harmony with our fellowmen. Otherwise modern civilization could never have come into existence."

Sincere Echo

"Somehow, I feel that my words tonight will find a sincere echo in the hearts of all who hear them. It is not for me to put forward concrete proposals; that must be left to those who have the power to guide their nations toward closer understanding. God grant that they may accomplish that great task before it too late."

(The address was not re-broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation. The Daily Mail of London, which said the tone of the appeal was "unexceptionable" and would "resound in all the chancelleries of the world," declared that the issue of whether it should be broadcast "would probably not have presented itself as a delicate problem" if the royal court had been in London. King George VI and Queen Elizabeth are now enroute to Canada and the United States.)

(An editorial in The London Evening Standard said that the "error" of the Duke of Windsor in broadcasting while their majesties are enroute to America "cannot excuse the stupidity of the B. B. C." in not relaying the speech in England. It added: "This morning all Britain has read the Duke's pronouncement. Why should they not have heard it last night? . . . An attempt to impose censorship which does not gain its object is worse than no censorship at all."

(The radio aboard the Empress of Australia, which is carrying the king and queen to North America, did not pick up the broadcast. Reports from Verdun said the Duke had obtained the consent of the king, his younger brother, before making the speech.)

lodges which took over the building some time ago.

Closed Several Months

Operated by the members of the Masonic order as a Masonic Club until the first of the present year, the building has since been closed. The fine old brick mansion and extensive grounds were bought several years ago with the intention of erecting a Masonic Temple suitable for all Masonic meetings. A committee from the two local lodges has had the building matter in charge since.

In the basement of the house will be constructed suitable kitchens and a large dining room. The main floor will be but slightly altered and will be used as club rooms while the second story will be converted into a large meeting room with ante-rooms and necessary lodge room accessories. In order to convert the second floor steel girders will be placed to support the upper floor where locker room and storage space will be provided.

Small Addition

In order to use the entire second floor for lodge room purposes there will be a small new addition placed on the west side next the Governor Clinton Hotel to even out the structure and provide a meeting room of approximately the same size as the lodge rooms now used by Kingston Lodge No. 10, and Roudout Lodge No. 343. George E. Lowe is architect. When completed the structure will be used as a Masonic Temple by both the uptown and the downtown lodges as well as for all Masonic organizations which now use the two temples.

A committee of three members from each of the local lodges will have the work in charge. The committee is: Charles F. Lebert, Leslie Lyons and Henry Swart from Kingston Lodge and Donald Schoonmaker, Richard Heffernan and Robert G. Groves from Roudout Lodge.

Put Yourself Across Speaking in Public

Here Are Helps to Confidence
Young Bob Smith is making his way to the top in club and town affairs—in business, too—since he learned public speaking!

As a guest of the club he's addressing, Bob knows it's correct form to begin his speech, "Mr. Chairman, hosts and friends—." Correct also for him to reply to the chairman's welcome with, "It's impossible to express my appreciation of the warm reception you have given me."

Confidently you can address all types of audiences—in clubs and business—when you learn the art of public speaking.

No danger of fumbling, repeating yourself, if you prepare for your talk by first jotting down the main ideas in logical order. Is your voice clear, do you enunciate distinctly? Read aloud, pronounce every syllable—"government" not "gov-ments." effective to use gestures if you keep them few and spontaneous.

Make yourself felt in club work, on the job, by knowing how to speak effectively! Our 32-page booklet tells how to train your voice, prepare talks. Gives sample speeches for many occasions, parliamentary forms, rules for toastmasters and radio speakers.

Send 10 cents in coin for your copy of PUBLIC SPEAKING SELF-TAUGHT to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of book-time making new book racks for the church news, and the pastor expects to stain and varnish this. This will help to prolong the life of the new song books.

Lincoln and Oscar Christensen of New York spent the week-end with their parents and sister here on the farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Smith of Kingston spent their sixth wedding anniversary last Sunday at the home of Mrs. Smith's father, John A. Barringer.

Mrs. Paul Geisler, with her daughter, Judith, of Rutherford, N. J., visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Krum last week, at the Krum Homestead.

Miss Violet Christensen, Mrs. Milton Gelbert and daughter, Joan, with her mother, Mrs. Ward Cornish last Saturday were in Kingston attending the apple blossom festival and parade. They also visited and had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. George Miller of Tremper avenue.

Last Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Katie Davis and Mr. and Mrs. B. Vanner visited Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Gray at Olive Bridge.

Church school will be held at 10 o'clock next Sunday morning with the superintendent Clayton Christiansa in charge.

Morning worship will be at 11 o'clock with sermon by the pastor, the Rev. William H. Barringer. The subject of the sermon will be, "Mother" with special musical program. All in the community are invited to attend the services.

The subject of the sermon for the children will be, "The Carnation." The subject which the pastor will speak about next Tuesday evening at the community circle meeting, will be "The Holy Spirit and Motherhood."

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters
Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.
Tally Mack, a young farmer who has inherited half the Russell estate, Seacliff.

Yesterday: Little Betsy trespasses on the Russell side. She says Uncle Tally is going to raise money.

Chapter Eight Truck Farm

I ATE in the afternoon the crowd insisted on telling their conquering hero and arranged an impromptu dinner and dance at the club; inviting everyone to stay on in sport clothes and join in the private celebration. Jocelyn perceived that Bob longed to get away, and she reflected spitefully that he probably wished to see how his protégés were doing at Seacliff.

However, as he was guest of honor, he had no opportunity and so it was well past midnight when they got home.

An unfamiliar reiterated sound woke her at daybreak. Her roind, sleep-drugged, finally identified it as the crowing of a rooster. Pulling the covers over her ears she started drifting back to sleep when suddenly the realization smote her that there were no roosters at Seacliff. It took a few minutes for this thought to penetrate, but when it did she struggled upright and strained her ears. It was a rooster.

Curiously overcome sleepiness. After taking a cold shower to wake up, she towed her tingling body, then stepped into flannel slacks and slipped a woolly blue sweater over her tousled curls.

Her stealthy creeping down the back stairs was halted by a new sound. A sort of low, rumbling animal sound... the lowing of a cow!

One minute later she stood on Mack territory surveying with astonishment what had yesterday morning been a double tennis court and was now a chicken pen. The tennis nets had been taken down and the entire space enclosed in close-mesh wire. Dozens of white chickens pecked at grain strewn plentifully over the hard-rolled turf.

Again she heard the cow. Two spots of angry color appeared in her cheeks. She marched to the stable and jerked open a door; peered into the comparative dimness; saw, on the left side beyond the three horses selected by the Macks, two black and white cows. She exclaimed:

"Oh, good morning, Miss Russell," called an amused voice. "Admiring my livestock?"

Jocelyn headed for the voice; found Tally calmly sitting on a box milking one of the animals.

"How dare you put cows in here?" she whispered.

"They are fine representatives of the bovine genus," Tally rattled on imperturbably. "Guaranteed to give five gallons of milk a day. The chest of drawers in Gretchen's room bought these."

"And what bought the chickens?" she choked.

"Two tables and three chairs. And the plow cost a bed. Chicken feed and human feed cost two pictures and a tapestry," she stammered.

"Sure. For the garden. If I plow up all the ground from the tennis courts back to the stables—on my side, of course—I can raise enough potatoes, peas, beans, carrots and onions to feed my family and have some left to sell."

Jocelyn counted to ten and swallowed hard. "But I can't do that," she declared. "You—you just can't turn Seacliff into a— a truck farm! It's desecration. You just can't do it!"

"Pecan!"

"SORRY. I've already done it. Since circumstances forced us to live on this feudal estate of yours, that same circumstance forced me to find some way to eat and make a living. There's really nothing you can do about it, Miss Russell. Would you mind leaving?"

You seem to be making the cow nervous and if she gets nervous she won't give milk."

"Oh!" she choked, feeling as if her face were purple. "So I make your cow nervous, do I? I hate you!"

"Please, Miss Russell, if you don't stop upsetting my cow I shall have to put you out! Oh, by the way, are these horses broken to harness? I shall have to use two of them for plowing."

"Listen—listen to me," she implored wildly. "If you had to raise money why didn't you give me an opportunity to buy my own grand-mother's possessions, instead of selling them to strangers? I would have paid you the same amount. Those things are heirlooms; they mean something to a Russell. It was a horrid thing to do—I'll never forgive you for it!"

"Sorry again," he apologized, yet he did not sound the least bit regretful. "It never occurred to me you'd want that creaky old stuff. Believe me, the next time I shall inform you."

"The next time!"

"Certainly. It just happens I am more concerned with living right now on food instead of living in the past on memories."

"You've already sold everything of any value to a dealer," she complained bitterly.

Continued tomorrow.

Maroon Trackmen At Poughkeepsie On Wednesday at 4

Following the crushing 66-24 triumph at Middletown last Saturday afternoon the Kingston High School runners will attempt to make it two in a row tomorrow afternoon when they travel to Poughkeepsie. The meet will start at 4 o'clock.

Although it is uncertain whether Coaches G. Warren Kias and Loyne Connick will take the same squad down to the Bridge City on Wednesday, it is highly probable that the majority of the Middletown invaders will be in the bus when it leaves the school at 2:30.

A number of interesting facts were noted in the first meet Saturday. The work of Jack Falen, Johnny "Smookey" Ennis and Culver Ten Brock was nothing less than sensational. With this trio in form Wednesday, Kingston will again be a tough nut to crack.

Kingston also showed its strength by the fine performances of Jess Shults, Joe Beirach, Joe Toney, Ken Douglas and Bill Tucker. All of these stalwarts are looking forward to another big day tomorrow.

Poughkeepsie will undoubtedly offer a better brand of competition tomorrow afternoon than did Middletown on the week-end.

Three cheers for Jupe Pluvius if he stays away from the Athletic Field tonight...The reason—it's opening night for the City Baseball League...Joneses and the Independents of Jack Dawkins Schwenk, alderman-at-large, is scheduled to throw out the first ball...Mayor Heislman will be in New York talking about the Broadway crossing, so can't be around...The city administration promises plenty of bleachers and a swell playing field to start the season...Wonder what will come out of that move about the leagues playing Sunday baseball...Mello Bettina will take the place of John Henry Lewis in that London bout, provided he doesn't sign to box Billy Conn in Pittsburgh in the meantime...William Woodward may send his derby winner, Johnstown, to the stud for six months in each year...Johnny Attell, new match-

Woodward Thought Up His Derby Winner Johnstown

New York, May 9 (AP)—After watching a horse like Johnstown run it isn't difficult to understand the fascination the racing game holds for such a man as William Woodward, the banker who owns and operates the Belair stud.

For the load of money Woodward has sunk in racing since the bug first bit him more than 20 years ago we probably could have bought and operated an ocean-going yacht, complete with penants. Maybe he has a yacht, too. But he's probably had more fun out of producing three Kentucky derby winners.

To most of the 70,000 who watched the magnificent Johnstown cakewalk home at Louisville it was an exciting two minutes. Those who had money on him, especially in the winter books, enjoyed every stride of his majestic progress. But nobody else saw him through quite the same eyes at Woodward.

Woodward literally "thought up" Johnstown. There are some wealthy owners who seek advice from their trainers and from experts on equine blood lines in their efforts to produce great foals. Always they're seeking the combination of sire and dam that will bring both speed and endurance—the super-horse.

Woodward asks no advice of anyone. Breeding is his hobby. It's an expensive one but, after all, he's paying for it. He decided that the great sprinter James-town, bred to the little broken-hipped filly La France, would result in a fine horse. La France never had run a race, but Woodward knew there was endurance in her blood. The colt, of course, was Johnstown's sire.

Johnstown's dam, however, maybe how Woodward felt when he stood out there Saturday and watched them put the roses around his big horse's neck.

Strikes 6 Men In One Inning

Fremont, Neb., May 9 (AP)—Harvey Jensen, pitcher for a Fremont American Legion Junior League baseball team, struck out six men (that's right, six) in one inning of a league game.

Here's the way it went: The first batter up struck out and the catcher hung onto the ball.

The next three batters struck out but the catcher kept dropping third strikes and all three got on base.

The fifth man walked. The sixth man struck out. The catcher dropped the ball, picked it up and threw to Jensen who threw to the first baseman who tagged out the runner. The runner had thought himself thrown out and stepped off base.

The seventh man struck out. The catcher hung onto the ball. Harvey muttered, "whee!"

Good Tee Shots May Decide Title

Philadelphia, May 9 (AP)—Good tee shots, big Ed Dudley believes, may decide the winner of the national open golf championship here next month.

Dudley, one of the foremost golfers in the country, expressed his opinion after a practice round over the par 69 layout at the Spring Mill course of the Philadelphia Country Club where time open will be held.

"It's a very exacting tee shot course," the home town pro declared as he posted at 74 for the 6,786 yard layout. "If you get off a good, accurate tee shot you are all right. But let that tee shot be out of line just a few feet and you are in trouble."

Jimmy Thomson, Byron Nelson, Ed Hogan, Jimmy Hines, Vic Grezzi, Sam Byrd, Ted Turner and Leo Diegel, among the topflight golfers who got in practice rounds yesterday, agreed the course is "most exacting."

A Practice for St. Joseph's Team

A practice is scheduled for St. Joseph's softball team at this evening at lower Forsyth Park diamond, starting at 6:30 o'clock. In case of rain the team will hold a meeting in the school hall at 6:45 o'clock. All players are requested to be present.

maker for Mike Jacobs, is going to feature new blood in the Hipp and Garden.

Dr. Robert Dyer, according to the Associated Press, told a clinic of pro golfers in Chicago that Sammy Snead is the Paderewski of golf... "His athlete's brain is completely developed," said the doctor... "He has muscle, sense and rhythm..." Some of the New York schools may follow Notre Dame's lead and pull out of the Garden's privately promoted basketball games... The Yanks are supposed to have offered Hank Borowy, Fordham's star, a bonus of $10,000 to sign a contract... Gabby Hartnett has benched Billy Herman, Hank Leiber and Joe Marty for not hitting, say some, and others claim it's for not hustling... Eddie Briez, of the Associated Press, suggests Spencer Tracey for that Knute Rockne part in Warner Bros. picture of his life.

City League Managers Talk About Playing Sunday Ball

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

(By The Associated Press)
It is a pleasure to report that the Old Wild Hoss of the Osage can still get the bit in his teeth.

It is also a good thing for the St. Louis Cardinals' Gas-House Gang that the Old Hoss, otherwise known as Pepper Martin, can still run those base paths. Because now that the Cards have run out of "gas," a little pepper comes in handy.

The Old Hoss, the boys in the game will tell you, is a ballplayer's ballplayer—the winning kind. That's why it was nothing to cheer about when you heard his future with the Cards was hanging by a hair there a few months back. The club's master-minds (silence in the back of the house, please) had the idea he was somewhat spavined and ready for the farm. But they finally decided to let him hang around—and look what happened:

The Old Hoss won a ball game yesterday, just like he won the 1931 World Series, by running wild on the base lines. He didn't steal four, or three, or even two. It was just one, but it was the big one—from third to home. Yep, he stole home with the only run of the ball game, while Rookie Russ Evans, who already had lost one game this year on a balk, stood there open-mouthed, too surprised to make the throw to the plate until it was too late. So, when the Old Hoss came streaking in, the Cards were on top 1-0 over the Brooklyn Dodgers, a victory that boosted the gasless Gas Housers into a second place tie in the league.

Hubbell Comes Back
Pepper wasn't the only good old guy in the business who showed his stuff yesterday. In New York, for instance, the Cubs beat the Giants 4-2 behind Big Bill Lee's elbowing and batting, but along in the eighth inning, when Gabby Hartnett's crew al-ready had the game on ice, they called old Squarepants Carl Hubbell in from the dugout.

Now old Squarepants had an operation over the winter on that "meal-ticket" southpaw wing of his and the soupbone didn't come round. But he did a right fair job in his season debut yesterday. In two innings, the Cubs managed just two fly balls and a loud foul off him, so, from all indications, it shouldn't be long before King Carl is back on his throne—that little mound out there 60 feet in front of the plate.

It was in this game that the Cub's Right-shoulder, Phil Cavarretta, Phil returning to action after warming the bench for a week, broke his right ankle sliding into second and wound up in a hospital.

Klein Breaks It Up
Then there was old mighty Bob Johnson, one of the mighty few factors keeping the Athletics out of the bush leagues these last few years. Bob collected two homers to give the A's a 6-5 decision over the Detroit Tigers. This was the Detroit's seventh straight set-back and dropped them into the American League cellar. Then there also was old Chuck Klein, whose pinch-triple with the bases loaded broke up a ball game and handed the Phillies an 8-7 verdict over the Cincinnati Reds.

The New York Yankees dropped out of the American League lead in losing a 5-3 contest to the Chicago White Sox. Lefty Edgar Smith, only recently acquired from the Athletics, not only held the Yankees to seven hits, but he hit the single which drove the winning runs home. Boston's Red Sox, rained out in St. Louis, climbed into the loop lead as a result.

Jim Tobin tossed a five-hitter for a 3-2 Pittsburgh win over the Boston Bees, and Cleveland's Indians did all their run-making in the seventh to trounce Washington's Senators 6-2. It was the fifth straight loss for both the Bees and the Nats.

Schwenk to Toss First Ball at 6:15 On Athletic Field

Independents and Joneses Both Anxious About Victory in Inaugural of Two-Circuit

Tonight's the night! Promptly at 6:15 this evening His Honor, Alderman-at-Large Schwenk will fan his fast one across the plate and as Umpire Dick Dulin yells "Play Ball," the '39 City Baseball League season takes off. Manager Jack Dawkins' Independents and Ad Jones' Dairy-mans are the initial twilight tilt opponents and the long-standing rivals will be out to jump into the league leadership by notching a win. With the Athletic Field amply provided with bleachers and the diamond spic and span, the baseball bugs will see "Schoolboy" Bush and Jorfes' surprise luring selection, young George Celuch, clash.

The Independents' probable starting nine should take the field with most of the '38 Kyanize powerhouse back in line again. Bing Van Etten, fielding phenom, will be at first, with Charles Bock and "Red" McLean teaming up around the keystone sack. Ad Stump, veteran hot corner guarddian, will be at third. Charley Lay, Andy Dykes and Tommy Maines will caper out in the garden with Gene Rider behind the platter.

Manager Berardi's roster looks like Schener in the first ine spot, Mel Berardi and Chappie Van Derzee in the mid-way stations and Andy Celuch covering the hot corner. T. Berardi and Johnny Berardi and smooth-working Elmer Hopper loom as the probable outer garden trio for the butter and egg boys.

Pitching Stars
Jones Dairy's powerful pitching staff of Brown, Neff, Chick, George Celuch and Mislove shapes up as the most outstanding array in recent seasons: Youthful George Celuch is most likely to get the nod from Manager Berardi although old reliable Chick might possibly be a last-minute starting choice.

The signing of Schatzel, McLean and Andy Dykes has bolstered the pitching chances of the Merchants and the business boys will be out for a kit tonight. Dykes is a neat hitter and one of the best fly-hawks in the loop and his addition bolsters the Independents fly-chasing patrol. Jimmy Ashdown should strengthen the weak-hitting Jonesmen considerably this season and he is an all-around utility man.

Bush, last season's No. 1 tosser, will be aided by the addition of southpaw Bud Swarthout this season. Lack of control has hampered the portside in past seasons but Swarthout working right is capable of good games. This may be the year for the erratic ex-Closi flogger.

Trinity Softies Practice Tonight

Trinity M. E. softball team, playing Comforters this evening on Upper Hasbrouck Park diamond at 6:30 o'clock, will line up as follows: Frankie Kouhout, catcher; Harold Tubby, pitcher; P. Short, 1m; Bill Dougherty, 2b; Richard Shabot, 3b; Joe St. Paul, Jr., ss; Harry Williams, cf; Andy Griffin, rf; Fred Gilbert, cf; Bill Tubby, lf. All Trinity players are asked to be present no later than 6:15 o'clock.

Likelihood of a six-team circuit will be decided tonight after the game when the managers will meet to decide the fate of the last-minute entry of the St. Remy club. The St. Remy bid will be definitely decided tonight and all managers are requested to be on hand for the special meeting.

Put Yourself Across Speaking in Public

Here Are Helps to Confidence

Young Bob Smith is making his way to the top in club and town affairs—in business, too—since he learned public speaking! As a guest of the club he's addressing, Bob knows it's correct form to begin his speech, "Mr. Chairman, hosts and friends—" Correct also for him to reply to the chairman's welcome with, "It's impossible to express my appreciation of the warm reception you have given me."

Confidently you can address all types of audiences—in clubs and business—when you learn the art of public speaking.

No danger of fumbling, repeating yourself, if you prepare for your talk by first jotting down the main ideas in logical order.

Is your voice clear, do you enunciate distinctly? Read aloud, pronounce every syllable—"gov-ern-ment" not "gov-ments." effective to use gestures if you keep them few and spontaneous.

Make yourself felt in club work, on the job, by knowing how to speak effectively! Our 32-page booklet tells how to train your voice, prepare talks. Gives sample speeches for many occasions, parliamentary forms, rules for toastmasters and radio speakers.

Send 10 cents in coin for your copy of PUBLIC SPEAKING SELF-TAUGHT to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of book-let.
